LISTS OF HERDING/LIVESTOCK GUARDIAN DOG BREEDS THAT CAN TAKE PART IN FCI EVENTS AND RECEIVE FCI TITLES AND AWARDS

May 1st, 2023

1 INTRODUCTION

- 1.1. FCI Herding Dogs Commission's (FCI HDC) priority is to maintain the working ability of dog breeds to serve livestock. In addition to health, anatomy and appearance, which is the main objective of current dog breeding, it is equally important to preserve and develop the original inner qualities and instincts.
- 1.2. The challenges of keeping livestock have led to the breeding of dogs that are excellent at herding or/and guarding. Historical, economic and farming changes have also affected dog breeding and the selection of these breeds has led to a loss of working ability. Despite the fact that these dogs are essentially born to work, the breed standard no longer requires a working test as a condition for breeding.
- 1.3. Some breeds are subject to a working trial (indicated in the breed standard) as instructed by the National Canine Organisation (NCO) of their country of origin (see TABLE 1 BELOW).
- 1.4. Some NCOs however have obtained the FCI permission to include their own native breeds, not subject to a working trial, in the FCI list of breeds exceptionally allowed to be entered in working class (see TABLE 2 BELOW).
- 1.5. The FCI HDC introduced test and trial rules for Herding and Livestock Guardian dogs. These rules are applied to preserve the characteristics related to the ability to handle livestock and maintain these aptitudes through the work of many dog generations. The events organised on the basis of these rules are open to more breeds than those referred to at 1.3.
- 1.6. Although the various tests and trials are open to a wide range of breeds, the FCI titles and awards that can be gained are not available for all these breeds.
- 1.7. This document informs about the breeds concerned. The lists in the next tables can be adapted, if necessary, by the FCI HDC.
